Reviews

A whole new eBook with a brand new point of view. It is definitely simplistic but shocks in the 50 percent of the publication. I am just pleased to explain how this is the greatest ebook i have read during my very own daily life and could be he best ebook for possibly.

Not illustrated. 1891 Excerpt: . . . In a white farm house, on the breezy hillside overlooking the bay, the old lake captain lay dying. It was almost the last of winter, but the bay had not yet gone to sleep under its white covering, and when the wind came blowing straight out from frozen Manitoba and the far northwest, great waves rolled in and fell on the beach below with a burst of stormy music. On the shore, the pines and cedars sang their low refrain to the rhythmic song of the wind, and the silver-stemmed birches, bare even of withered leaves, made of their slender boughs harps for the winter gales to play their wildest strains upon. Sound of wind and wave were blended to a murmuring monotone by the captains bedside, in the room where for many wakeful nights in more than one year of winter and spring, summer and autumn, he had lain and listened to the monotonous beat of the surf upon the shore, the sweetest music in the world to him. Many wondered that in his old age, with wealth at his command, and a choice of pleasant homes in the great rich city at the head of Lake Michigan, he had chosen this quiet spot for his place of rest. But there were those who knew how it was with him, --knew how the water called him with all its manifold voices, from the gentle ripple of summer waves to the rush and roar...
