Excerpt: . . . car that he was to sell, to ride around over the country to get orders and to demonstrate. If he made a sale, the company delivered from the stock on the floor a car like that. Appellant testified substantially as follows: That he lived in Fort Smith; that Payne made three or four trips to his house in a Dort car and that they were a week or ten days making the trade and that he finally bought the car from Payne on Saturday; that he gave him 200 in cash and a note for 300 due in thirty days; that he knew that Payne was an agent but knew nothing of any limited authority; that Payne had this car in his possession and had been trying to sell it to him for about ten days; that after the sale was closed and the car delivered, money turned over and agent gone, he had a conversation with Mr. Fioretti in which Mr. Fioretti admitted to him that Payne was his agent. Witness stated that Fioretti said that Payne approached him about this very sale before the car was sold to Mr. Pierce and that this conversation occurred in Mr. Dodds office. Witness said the statement was not made in an effort to compromise. He testified that the car was second-hand when he bought it and had been driven about a thousand miles. Witness Shucknecht testified: that he met Payne about the middle of May,...
